

Creative + Grouchy

WORK

NEWS

CONTACT

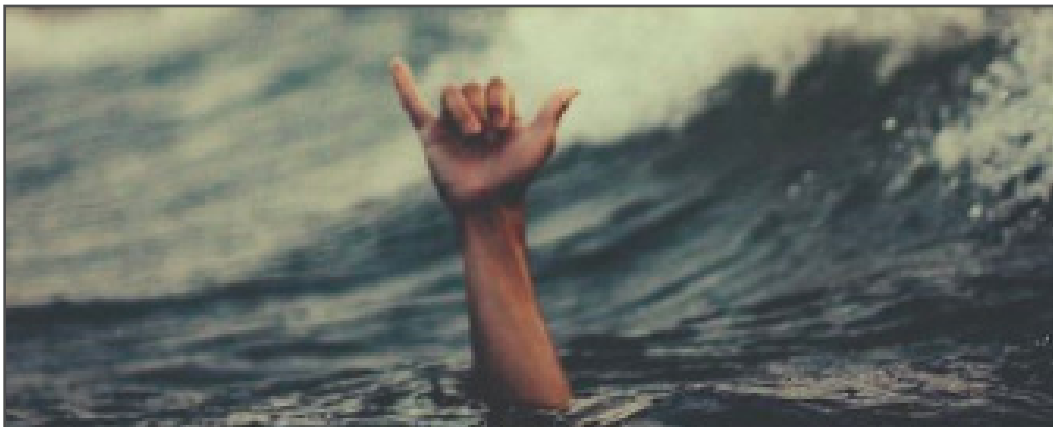

WHO WE ARE

Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consectetur adipiscing elit. Sed accumsan fermentum odio at posuere. Mauris ut faucibus sapie turpis.

WHAT WE DO

Quisque tristique, elit eu rutrum fringilla, massa turpis vehicula dolor, id pharetra tellus arcu sed tincidunt. Mauris ut faucibus sapien, at vestibulum quis lacus mattis eros sollicitudin auctor. Mauris ut faucibus sapien, at vestibulum turpis.

CATEGORY LIST ▶

- CATEGORY 1
- CATEGORY 2
- CATEGORY 3
- CATEGORY 4
- CATEGORY 5

Apple print ad

November 12, 2014

No porro delectus scribentur duo. Vix quod expetenda ad, vel ex movet errem regione. Et tota dictas volumus sed, ad vero voluptaria eloquentiam vix.

CLIENTS ▶

- CLIENT 1
- CLIENT 2
- CLIENT 3
- CLIENT 4
- CLIENT 5

February 27, 2015

Turning out the lights on a memorable career

So my dad retired yesterday.

My sister wrote her own post about this yesterday and it sparked some thoughts of my own.

Being 26 years old and following a similar path as he did throughout his life, that is actually a very surreal thought for me.

Retirement.

This is something that from the moment we enter grade school, we are all working towards. We go to grade school to go to middle school to go to high school to get into a good college to get a job to make a living to have enough funds to go back to how our lives started with not working and just living life. Unless you're a trust fund kid, then you never really worry about that stuff.

I cannot express how proud I am of my father. From moving states to driving at minimum 3 hours round trip for work for 7 years, he did everything he could to give his family the best life he possibly could.

He coached my brother and I in basketball for something like 3 years. He never played basketball, but he knew the game and loved teaching. He didn't teach me how to shoot a jumper, use a cross-over or post up. He taught me how to be a good teammate, how to respect others and the game.

WHAT'S ON MY MIND

Coastal Brown Bear Reflection

WHAT'S ON YOUR MIND?

NAME

EMAIL

SUBJECT

MESSAGE

SEND

